Breast Cancer

Every year, my school organizes a festival to support breast cancer. In that day we have to pay at least 2 dollars per student to wear no uniform at our school. A lot of students came to school with no uniform and giving the breast cancer club 2$. They also sell some food to the students which obviously cost some money. They sold cotton candy, pizza, slushies, burgers etc. Since it's a festival they also organized some activities for the students and organized some performance like singing or dancing. The school also made something called "The Color Run" which means that people run around the whole school while students throw some colored powder of different colors on them. We also have to pay 50$ for every student to support breast cancer. The way that the students get the money is by asking people to donate some money for breast cancer and pay an extra 10$ if we want to participate in "The Color Run". At the end of the day the school makes a thing where any student can shave they're head completely to give it to breast cancer for the people who has cancer can wear wigs. One of my classmates called Angelo participated in that movement and shaved his head with the French teacher to give it to the breast cancer club. A bunch of girls and teachers participated and managed to get a lot of hair. I saw Angelo's family giving him a hug of how brave he was to do that. Our school announced that we managed to get 27 000$ this year and last year we managed to get 23 000$!

That gesture was really sweet. I've been at my school for 2 years and now I'm starting another year. I am really excited for the festival! Ever since I've been a kid. At 8 or 10 years old I've been cutting my hair every year. Since my hair is thick it's good for wigs. I am really motivated and hopes that people who has cancer feels happy!
